Tanbook, Bluebook, and ALWD Citations: A 2007 Update

Gerald Lebovits
What Can a Competitor Do?

The Dividing Line Between Permissible Competitive Behavior and Tortious Interference With Contract

by Glen Banks

Also in this Issue

Non-compete Agreements Revisited
Going Beyond the Will
Derivative Standing for New York LLC Members
A Defense Lawyer’s Guide to No-Fault Litigation in New York State
Citing is power. Lawyers cite not merely to help their readers find the law. They cite to attribute and support. Good citing is the mark of a good lawyer. Good citing makes legal writing concise and honest. Good citing informs and persuades. Good citing impresses. Citing well isn’t just a matter of following rules. It’s also a matter of knowing your audience and following the right rules.

New Yorkers are rich with uniform systems of citation. But this wealth makes New York citing systemically un-uniform.

New York lawyers have several citing options. The leader is The Bluebook: A Uniform System of Citation. Established in 1926, The Bluebook is in its eighteenth (2005) edition. Less used, but gaining in popularity in the law schools, is a Bluebook competitor, the ALWD Citation Manual: A Professional System of Citation. ALWD first appeared in 2000. It’s already in its third (2006) edition.

The 2007 Tanbook is the best option for New York practitioners. It’s also the only option for New York practitioners.

The Official Style Manual
The Tanbook offers rules and suggestions on citing cases, statutes, rules, regulations, and secondary authority like law journals and treatises. It guides readers on style, usage, quoting, capitalizing, punctuating, and word choice. The 2007 version, the rules and suggestions go on for 205 pages.

Tanbook citing is immediately recognizable because citations are surrounded by parentheses, supporting information is added in brackets, and periods — like those after the “v” in “versus” — are omitted in key places. Here are three examples from the 2007 Tanbook: Case law: (Matter of Ganley v Giuliani, 253 AD2d 579, 580 [1st Dept 1998], revd 94 NY2d 207 [1999].) Statute: (Penal Law § 125.20 [4].) Secondary authority: (The Bluebook: A Uniform System of Citation [Colum L Rev Assn et al. eds, 18th ed 2005].)

The Tanbook is prepared by the New York State Law Reporting Bureau (LRB), an arm of the New York Court of Appeals. The LRB’s prime responsibility is to collate, select, and edit judicial opinions for publication online and in New York’s Official Reports: the Miscellaneous (Misc.), Appellate Division (A.D.), and New York (N.Y.) (Court of Appeals) reports. Opinions printed in the Official Reports conform to Tanbook citing. Readers can always find examples of perfect Tanbook citing by looking at a recent volume of the Official Reports, or even by going online and skimming a few cases.

The citation schemes for New York opinions published unofficially are Bluebook-based but Bluebook inaccurate. Thomson West’s N.Y.S.2d and N.E.2d use The Bluebook, but spacing and other significant details differ from The Bluebook’s. The New York Law Journal uses whatever system the author uses; it re-prints the opinion as submitted. The Law Journal will simply make some minor changes like adding periods after a “v” for “versus” in a case citation if the Tanbook-compliant author omits the period.

New York judges who want to publish their opinions in the Official Reports must cite Tanbook-style. New York lawyers, at their best when they make it easy for judges to rule for their clients, should cite Tanbook-style. As the 2007 Tanbook modestly explains, “Although not binding on them, many lawyers find the Manual useful in preparing papers for submission to New York courts.” Beyond using the Tanbook to help judges, lawyers should use the Tanbook because it’s always accurate. The LRB knows New York legal research — New York cases, statutes, and secondary authority — better than anyone.

The Tanbook shines by itself and by comparison. The Bluebook is always wrong on New York sources. New York practitioners who rely on The Bluebook do so at their peril. And ALWD makes no pretense about whether it applies to New Yorkers. ALWD itself tells its New York readers to cite Tanbook-style.

The Bluebook
The Bluebook is right for national and international sources. It’s right for law-review and law-journal editors and readers. It’s right for federal judges and practitioners. It’s wrong for law-

---

THE LEGAL WRITER

BY GERALD LEBOVITS

GERALD LEBOVITS is a judge of the New York City Civil Court, Housing Part, in Manhattan and an adjunct professor at St. John’s University School of Law. His e-mail address is Glebovits@aol.com.

---

Tanbook, Bluebook, and ALWD Citations: A 2007 Update

---

CONTINUED ON PAGE 52
THE LEGAL WRITER
CONTINUED FROM PAGE 64

ers who write to or for New York State courts.

The Bluebook is wrong about official citations. The Bluebook tells users to cite the unofficial N.E.2d for Court of Appeals cases instead of the official N.Y.3d. It also tells users to cite the unofficial N.Y.S.2d instead of the official A.D.3d or Misc. 3d for decisions from other courts. An example from The Bluebook is Palsgraf v. Long Island Railroad Co., 162 N.E. 99 (N.Y. 1928).9 Why The Bluebook favors the unofficial reports is a mystery. Unofficial reports are often inaccurate, and New York requires official citations for decisions appearing in the Official Reports and in practitioners’ appellate papers.10

The Bluebook is also wrong about parallel citations and what New York’s “local” rules demand. The Bluebook properly directs that “[i]n documents submitted to state courts, all case citations should be to the reporters required by local rules.”11 The Bluebook correctly refers its readers to Table BT.2, which commendably cites the Tanbook, the CPLR, and Court of Appeals and Appellate Division rules as the sources of New York’s local rules.12 But The Bluebook gets it wrong from there. The Bluebook explains that “[l]ocal rules often require citation to both the official state reporter and the unofficial regional and/or state-specific reporter”13 and cites Kenford Co. v. County of Erie, 73 N.Y.2d 312, 537 N.E.2d 176, 540 N.Y.S.2d 1 (1989),14 as an example of the supposed New York local rule requiring parallel citations.

That rule doesn’t exist. According to the CPLR and New York court rules, parallel citations to New York cases aren’t required for New York lawyers. Nor are they helpful to New York judges, who rely, and properly so, on official citations only. As the 2007 department or district, for intermediate appellate courts and for trial courts, to tell readers whether the authority is binding or persuasive and, if persuasive, how persuasive. Additionally, The Bluebook’s citation to Schiffman isn’t from an intermediate appellate court, like New York’s Appellate Division or Appellate Term. It’s from a court of first instance: Supreme Court, Special Term. And Schiffman really does have intermediate appellate history. The Bluebook should have given this citation: In re Schiffman v. Corsi, 182 Misc. 498, 50 N.Y.S.2d 897 (Sup. Ct. N.Y. County), aff’d mem. sub nom. In re Schiffman v. Murphy, 268 App. Div. 765, 50 N.Y.S.2d 132 (1st Dep’t 1944), rev’d sub nom. Schiffman v. Corsi, 294 N.Y. 305, 62 N.E. 81, cert. denied, 326 U.S. 744 (1945).

The Bluebook continues to be wrong about the New York Law Journal. The Bluebook offers two ways to cite the New York Law Journal. Both are wrong. In one place, The Bluebook tells us that the Law Journal publishes opinions from the federal district court in Massachusetts and that dates of decision, in addition to publication dates, are available for citing. Neither is true. The Bluebook example is Charlesworth v. Mack, N.Y. L.J., Dec. 5, 1990, at 1 (D. Mass. Dec. 4, 1990).18 Sixty-one pages of Citation explains The Bluebook’s deficiencies and tells lawyers, law students, and law-journal editors how to correct them. If you must use The Bluebook, combine it with the Rules of Citation. The Rules of Citation is prepared by St. John’s law librarian William H. Manz, who also wrote Gibson’s New York Legal Research Guide (3d ed. 2004), which dedicates many pages to comparing Bluebook, ALWD, and Tanbook citing.

ALWD

The ALWD citation manual is designed by legal-writing experts to substitute for the inordinately complex Bluebook. ALWD has succeeded in its mission: It’s much easier to use than The Bluebook. For example, it eliminates the unnecessary distinction between citing for law reviews and law journals and citing in practitioners’ legal documents.

Experts doubt whether ALWD will ever rival The Bluebook in popularity. The subtle distinctions in citing between ALWD and The Bluebook are noticeable to experienced practitioners and recent graduates from law review and moot court. They will assume that those who cite ALWD-style don’t know how to use The Bluebook.

In terms of New York citations, ALWD, in its third edition, is a vastly

New York judges who want to publish their opinions in the Official Reports must cite Tanbook-style.

The Bluebook example is Palsgraf v. Long Island Railroad Co., 162 N.E. 99 (N.Y. 1928).9 Why The Bluebook favors the unofficial Revisions for 2007 include rules requiring writers to add years of decision to case-law authority, eliminating “supra” usage, and new rules aiding writers’ use of electronic formats and making it easier to quote. The 2007 Tanbook offers new abbreviations, fewer capitalizations, and excellent guidance on gender-neutral writing and writing in plain English, such as avoiding Latinisms and legalisms. It also offers advice on reducing excessive hyphenation and italics. The 2007 revisions incorporate revisions from 2004, including eliminating asterisks “* * *” in favor of ellipses “….” and forbidding commas after signals like “see” and “contra.”

The 2007 Tanbook still includes two relics: Citations surrounded by disconcerting parentheses and brackets. The original view was that citations should be placed into but set off from the text. Parentheses and brackets satisfied that mandate. Today they are anachronism, included, perhaps, only because the LRB must change citation usage incrementally, not wholesale. Another problem with the Tanbook is that it gives writers too much discretion in citing cases and secondary authority. Writers and readers want and need to be told what to do. As lawyers, we are confused when we have too many choices. That discretion includes whether a citation will be part of the sentence or a separate sentence.

Despite the Tanbook’s relics and excessive permissiveness, New York lawyers, trained in The Bluebook and, increasingly, ALWD, would be smart to keep the 2007 Tanbook on their desks. The 2007 Tanbook is user-friendly in organization. It is accurate and comprehensive in legal research. It is progressive and informative on usage and style. It’s the best of the options by far. It’s for New Yorkers, by New Yorkers.

Some say you get what you pay for. Not so the 2007 Tanbook, available for free online. Other than the LRB’s free online case-law publication service, it’s the best free legal resource in New York.

In the next issue, the Legal Writer will continue with its series on Legal Writing Do’s, Don’ts and Maybes.
THE LEGAL WRITER
CONTINUED FROM PAGE 53

10. See, e.g., Disenhouse Assocs. v. Mazzaferrro, 135 Misc. 2d 1135, 1137 n., 519 N.Y.S.2d 119, 120 n. (Civ. Ct. N.Y. County 1987) (urging attorneys not to cite “the unofficial reports only”) (citing CPLR 5529(e), which provides that in their appellate briefs, attorneys who cite New York cases must cite the Official Reports, if available); People v. Materia, 52 Misc. 2d 674, 687, 276 N.Y.S.2d 776, 789 (Sup. Ct. Queens County 1967) (“[W]e are required, in the rendition of our opinions, to cite New York decisions from the official reports, if any, as the counsel themselves are bound to do in their briefs on appeal.”).

12. Id. Rule Bf.2, at 38.

13. Id. Rule B5.1.3, at 9 (emphasis in original).

14. Id.

15. Tabbook Rule 2.2 (b)(1), at 14.

16. Bluebook Rule 10.4(b), at 90.

17. Id.

18. Id. Rule 10.1, at 80.

19. Id. Rule 16.5(c), at 141.

20. See supra text and accompanying note 8.

21. ALWD Rule 11.3(g), at 56.

22. Id. Rule 12.4(d)(3)(g), at 82.

23. Id. Rule 27.4(f), at 243.

25. Tabbook Foreword at iii.

DEAN OF THE LAW SCHOOL

Hofstra University School of Law invites applications and nominations for Dean of the Law School.

Founded in 1970, the School of Law has a history of innovation and scholarship, as demonstrated by its leadership in areas such as international law, child advocacy, legal ethics, and clinical instruction. With over 50 full-time faculty, Hofstra Law provides students with a transformative education in which theory is fully integrated with litigation and skills training. A regional center for the National Institute for Trial Advocacy, Hofstra Law School student body numbers more than 1,200, with an alumni base of nearly 9,000. Hofstra's research institutes and centers and four student-published academic journals round out the academic environment.

Located on Hofstra University’s 240-acre Long Island campus in Hempstead, NY, the Law School’s connection to excellent business and communication schools, as well as to other university departments, provides the legal community with exciting interdisciplinary opportunities.

The successful candidate will be an innovative administrator with experience and demonstrable success in leadership and management roles. He/she has a record of accomplishment and other scholarship in many of the following areas: legal education, legal scholarship, the practice of law, administration, fundraising and development. A Juris Doctorate is required.

Please visit the Hofstra Law School web site at http://law.hofstra.edu for additional information. Screening begins immediately and continues to the time of selection. Applications should include a current curriculum vitae and a letter discussing the candidate’s qualifications.

Hofstra University School of Law Dean Search
Heidrick & Struggles, Inc. Attn: Nathaniel J. Sutton
245 Park Avenue, Suite 4300 New York, NY 10167
Phone: 212-867-9876 Fax: 212-867-3219
Email: hofstralaw@heidrick.com

Hofstra University is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer.