Playing 'The Pedophile Professor'

Playing 'The Pedophile Professor'

Gossip columnist Liz Smith recently reported that Rupert Murdoch’s 20th Century Fox will launch a blockbuster film starring Tom Hanks (“Forest Gump,” “Philadelphia Story”) or Harrison Ford (“Indiana Jones,” “Sabrina”) as Indiana University’s Alfred C. Kinsey, the “father of the sexual revolution,” now often called “the pedophile professor.”

Ain’t that neat? Another Hollywood documentary comes to the aid of the most brutal and degenerate of our robber-baron sexual barbarians — this was inevitable.

In 1953, Murdoch telegraphed his Australian newspaper that they would not publish a word of Kinsey’s “muck ... preposterous document. Fortunately average American woman totally unlike Kinsey creature.”

Muck it was. But, muck was the least of it.

Picture Hanks or Ford as Kinsey. Here he hires and trains brutal child molesters to orally, anally and genitally violate infants and children for his “data.” Picture these movie stars arranging the filming and timing of the child tortures, promising his carefully selected predators their “findings” would influence the world. They would prove children “enjoyed” sex with molesters.

Kinsey told his predators the academic elite would teach their child sexuality assessments as scientific truth to American children — and shape school sex education as we know it today.

Will Hanks be the lucky guy setting up the 24-hour child sex laboratory experiments — one on a 4-year-old boy Kinsey says had “26 orgasms” or similar tests on 2-month-old babies? Will he be shown filming the screaming, weeping, convulsing, fainting children as they fought their Kinseyan trained rapists?

Will Ford stand by as children are tied down to produce child sex “data” for Kinsey’s book, “Sexual Behavior in the Human Male”? Will he, as Kinsey, label hundreds of child guinea pigs “partners” of their rapists? Not likely. More likely, 20th Century Fox will be continuing the 50-year cover-up, advocating acceptance of our own Nazi-like horror by remaking Kinsey in the image of Hanks or Ford. Ah, what monopoly control of the mass media can do!
In “Kinsey: Crimes & Consequences,” I document Kinsey’s Promethean drive to free mankind from the bounds of his limiting animal biology. A not-so-glitzy Indiana University (IU) zoology professor during the 1930s, ‘40s and ‘50s, Kinsey published junk statistics instead of science. According to Gore Vidal, during the 1950s, Kinsey was “the most famous man in the world for a decade.” Well, Kinsey’s influence is stronger today than in the ‘50s.

So, to kick off the 50th anniversary celebration of the “Kinsey Reports,” in 1997 former IU graduate and Kinsey Institute advisor, James Jones published Kinsey’s second biography. While touting Kinsey’s skills, Jones “outed” Kinsey and IU’s 50-year cover-up. Jones exposed Kinsey as a sado-masochistic bi/homosexual revolutionary. While the father of three children, he made pornography in his attic of his own wife, his male staff and their wives as performers. He sexually harassed his male students, using the academic “casting couch” to select his comely, young male co-authors. Kinsey was hardly the unbiased mid-western academic IU’s public relations division repeatedly showed to the world.

To facilitate the sex research, IU built a soundproof laboratory where Kinsey contained the screams of the brutal “experiments” from reaching passing faculty and students on IU’s bucolic Bloomington campus. So deep were the sexual pathologies of the father of the sexual revolution, Jones reported, that Kinsey was found unconscious on the floor of IU’s Wiley Hall after he tied a rope around his scrotum, tossed the rope over a pipe and jumped. Will “Indiana Jones” or “Forest Gump” leap over the pipe for that scene?

Or, how about the sight of Kinsey’s bloody bathtub do-it-yourself carving-knife circumcision? Will Hanks or Ford act out Kinsey’s masturbatory self-torture, so obsessive that it apparently caused his orchitis, a disease resulting in severely infected and swollen testicles? His orchitis explains why news films at the time reveal a tormented Kinsey — who sits leaning quite warily to one side of his buttocks. Umm, ouch, Ford or Hanks?

Trillions of filthy lucre has been made by unscrupulous villains out of Kinsey’s junk science, especially that of sex education and the mass media — marinated in pornography. Both school sex ed and the sex industry owe their sacred existence to the legal and attitudinal changes inculcated based on Kinsey’s falsification of the sexual lives of normal American wives and mothers, husbands and fathers and children. We now allow schools to teach Tom and Becky the methods of masturbation and to show them pornography based on Kinsey’s fraudulent claim that both are healthy and the most intelligent people (pssst, the Kinsey team) engage in both sans harm. But, Kinsey’s “orchitis” resulted from massive trauma to his genitalia and scrotum due to his obsessive masturbation, the orgiastic success of which eventually requires high pornography maintenance. One suspects that Condon will not disclose the fact that Kinsey’s premature death was largely due to his lifelong dependencies upon masturbation and pornography.

Which of the two movie heroes will play Kinsey as he turns down Interpol’s demands for the letters he wrote to a German Nazi pedophile, Dr. Fritz von Balluseck, trained for Kinsey’s “scientific” sex crimes on children? During his 1957 child-sex murder trial in Frankfort, most of the German newspaper headlines decried von Balluseck’s criminal Kinsey child-abuse collaboration. But, then like now, IU hid the truth from the American people and protected their Rockefeller grantee. The man about to be re-lionized by Big Monopoly Media committed these and other atrocities under the guise of science because he wanted to create millions of Americans in his own sexually deviant image. Look around. Did he succeed?

Kinsey’s efforts to change American law resulted in drastic liberalization of fifty-two sex offenses (e.g., rape, indecent exposure, adultery, abortion, obscenity, age of consent, sodomy, etc). Kinsey’s data helped to eliminate alimony and to trivialize moral conduct as required for child custody, etc. Kinsey’s ACLU groupies promoted his junk science in order to legalize their own peccadilloes. This accomplished, Kinsey’s “anything goes” legacy of sexual liberation is embedded in the nation’s moral fiber today.

IU’s President Myles Brand was asked to open Kinsey’s files in order to perhaps find and help Kinsey’s victimized children. Instead, President Brand passed the request on to Kinsey Institute director John Bancroft.
Bancroft is the same man who told his fellow Brits, on Britain’s Yorkshire television documentary “Kinsey’s Paedophiles,” that child sexual experiments by pedophiles are justified, lest we be “ignorant” of something or other. The Nazi doctors at Nuremberg of course expressed this same view. Bancroft quite shrewdly — and just as illegally — has refused Kinsey critics access to the publicly funded Institute materials.

And, in 1998, during both Bancroft and Brand’s watch, IU again placed its imprimatur on Kinsey’s propaganda. IU republished both of the “Kinsey Reports” as though Kinsey’s fabricated statistics by Clyde Martin — Kinsey’s young, statistically untrained sex partner — were reliable “data.”

For 50 years Kinsey’s junk science has defamed and harmed infants and children by attributing to them sexual lust and infiltrated schoolrooms, laws and public policies. For 50 years these phony data have defamed the sexual lives of the largely faithful and monogamous American women and men of the 1930s and 1940s.

Adding insult to national injury, champion basketball coach, Bobby Knight was recently fired by Indiana University righteous authorities for being “abusive” and “harassing.” Just watch as these same university trustees cover up Kinsey’s atrocities for the impending film glorifying their zoological sex “expert.”

The stench of hypocrisy permeates the Indiana University campus, its president and trustees, and, of course, the Kinsey Institute staff. Instead of helping to beatify their psychopathic professor by staging another phony cinematic show, Indiana University should open the criminal child abuse files of the Kinsey Institute to public scrutiny and eliminate the Kinsey Institute.

Let’s hear an ethical “No” from Hanks and Ford. Or next someone may pay them big bucks to make a hero of Dr. Joseph Mengele (or did too many of his victims survive?). How about Dr. Laura’s now famous maxim, “Go do the right thing”?
