Kaiser Foundation's Sexual Propaganda

Kaiser Foundation's sexual propaganda

A Kaiser Family Foundation “sex education” study was recently released alleging that that mom and dad want schoolteacher Jones to “tell all” about sex to Tom and Becky, according to a Sept. 26 Reuters report. Maybe and maybe not. But it should not surprise anybody that after 50 years of being taught Alfred C. Kinsey’s fraudulent sex data — reported in his 1948 book, “Sexual Behavior in the Human Male” — alleging “children are sexual from birth,” and after repeatedly hearing “they’re going to do ‘it’ anyway” from the smart folks, many parents would surrender and let the “sexperts” retrain their children in intimate sexual matters.

Beginning in 1964, a private entity called the Sex Information and Education Council of the United States had a virtual monopoly on the training of sex educators. And, not coincidentally, The Playboy Foundation granted money to Indiana University’s Kinsey Institute as well as the initial seed money for SIECUS — to serve as the school sex education arm for the Kinsey Institute. Also not unanticipated was the fact that this triumvirate colluded in popularizing recreational sex for school children.

SIECUS-trained “sexperts” teach from the fraudulent and criminal Kinsey canon, especially the “scientific” tables documenting the timed abuse — oral, manual and coital — of infants and children by a group of men Britain’s Yorkshire television entitled “Kinsey’s pedophiles.” Kinsey, SIECUS and Hugh Hefner all sang from the same sheet music, claiming that Kinsey’s brutal, pedophile-derived data proved sexual lust and capacity in infants and children. This eroticization of children has long served as the foundational canon for training the youngest of children about sex.

Assuming that most parents are totally unaware of Playboy’s funding of SIECUS and of the Kinsey Report, what is the reliability of the Kaiser Foundation “science?”

Scientifically, the Kaiser team could not have interviewed a statistically viable random sample of fully informed parents who agreed that “trained” sexperts should teach their children that sex could be healthfully split from the human soul and spirit. The surveyors need to tell their subjects the truth for the data to be accurate.

Kaiser claimed that parents agreed that teenagers should be taught how to use condoms (85 percent) and other forms of birth control (84 percent). Yet the investigators did not tell parents that the sexperts refuse to be “sex negative.” Thus, they hide unpleasant sex facts. For example, like condoms never protect against the human papilloma virus (HPV), the most common sexually transmitted disease and the cause of cervical cancer which kills 5,000 American women annually and which is spread by skin contact not by fluids.

Readily available contraception gives children a life-long contract for “sexual freedom.” The Washington Post reported on October 9, 1995, that “teen pregnancies are higher in states that teach condom use.” Despite the Center for Disease Control’s strong advocacy of condoms, not one of the CDC’s five “safer sex” programs has demonstrated a decline in out-of-wedlock births or STDs while the data reveal a not surprising increase in pregnancy rates for teens who use condoms. Or how about the fact that, as researcher Joel Brind reports, over 1.36 million abortions were performed in 1996 and yet 12 out of 13 recent medical studies have shown a significant link between abortion and breast cancer. The moms and dads in Kaiser’s survey did not receive this information.

In addition, the 76 percent of Kaiser’s sample parents, who reportedly want their children to know about homosexuality, were not told the following facts regarding sodomy. They would not know that these data on sodomy, as causal in AIDS, are commonly ignored in the classroom — sodomy having been transformed since the 1960s into a civil rights issue:

- From America’s founding until the 1948 Kinsey Report, sodomy was understood as largely a deviant and illegal homosexual act with homosexuality listed as a mental illness by the American Psychiatric and Psychological Associations until 1973.
- According to the December 1999 Center for Disease Control reports, heterosexual contact accounts for a miniscule 4 percent of AIDS in males and a total of 10 percent of all AIDS cases since reporting began in 1981. Despite the intense media spin, AIDS remains overwhelmingly a homosexual-drug user disease. The British medical journal, The Lancet, suggests that “increased condom use will increase the number of AIDS transmissions” that result from condom failures.

- The “Gay Lesbian Straight Education Network,” or “Parents, Families and Friends of Lesbians and Gays” and other adult groups work openly in senior and junior high schools nationwide, recruiting children to experiment with sodomy and other forms of sexual “outercourse.” The high rate of boys molested by “gays” is somewhat reflected in the five to one ratio of AIDS-infected boys to girls — the boys infected largely by an adult male.

- It is important to note here that the only African country that has reduced the AIDS plague is Uganda. The media dismisses Uganda’s success in diminishing the AIDS plague as the U.N. aggressively promotes and distributes condoms as their profitable antidote to the sweeping spread of AIDS across the continent. Ugandans determined that the only way to prevent AIDS is chastity. Promoting abstinence and monogamy as public policy, AIDS is down by 30 percent in rural areas and 50 percent in urban areas.

Kinsey, the father of the sexual revolution, said sex early (from birth) and often was the key to health. That meant sex with animals, incest, alone, in a group, homo-hetero, whatever — “anything goes.” America is nearing total sexual license. Teachers freely describe “how to” perform legal and illegal sexual behaviors earlier understood to be perversions of the sexual life, dramatically increasing sexual disease, dysfunction, out-of-wedlock births and sexual violence.

When contraception and abortion were illegal, Americans survived largely by self-discipline. Couple a massive dose of Kinseyan-school sex education since the 1960s with mass media sexploitation, contraception and abortion-on-demand and, my, my, “illegitimate” births increased 461 percent from 1960 to 1997. Despite millions in public funds, since the 1960s let us declare the obvious: Kaiser Foundation style school sex-ed gets an “F.”

Forty years of facts lead to one conclusion. The “sexual freedom” Kinsey predicted would bring us greater “health” has brought nationally more disease, dysfunction and economic strain — especially to struggling young female heads of households. We now know that Kinsey deliberately lied, America is not healthier and sexual freedom is not free.
The SIECUS-Kinsey “science” crowd are finally losing their grip on their lucrative government supported sex-ed fiefdom. Once holding monopoly control of school sex education, their “comprehensive sex education” allotment of schools in 1999 has shrunk to 58 percent, with “abstinence-only” programs peeling off 34 percent of the schools program funding.
This “scientific” salvo by the abortion-and-contraception-providing Kaiser Family Foundation is one in a string of assaults against the chastity and abstinence-until-marriage programs. These programs stress old-fashioned self-discipline and respect for others — standards which once flourished in American homes when we “waited.” We were, in fact, measurably healthier for it.
Children are not sexual actors from birth and should not be considered “emancipated.” Despite the latest desperate pseudo-science produced by Kaiser, sex education is not succeeding. Parents don’t pass the buck! Parents are the only teachers able to instill in their children — day in and day out — self-respect and honor for the gift of life. Parents and teachers should not be fooled by this latest megadose of fraudulent Kinseyan propaganda doled out by the Kaiser Foundation. Our children need the truth and a moderately strict supervising parent has been shown to be the best “sex educator.” Use common sense and, like the wise Ugandan leaders, stay on course with abstinence and monogamy — firm in the conviction that children cannot and must not engage in sexual behaviors prior to marriage. Their health and survival — and our civil society — depends upon it.
