Tradition claims that the Lemonweir River was named for a dream. Prior to the War of 1812, an Indian runner was dispatched with a war belt of wampum with a request for the Dakotas and Chippewas to meet at the big bend of the Wisconsin River (Portage). While camped on the banks of the Lemonweir, the runner dreamed that he had lost his belt of wampum at his last sleeping place. On waking in the morning, he found his dream to be a reality and he hastened back to retrieve the belt. During the 1820’s, the French-Canadian fur traders called the river, La memoire - the memory.

The Lemonweir rises in the extensive swamps and marshes in Monroe County. The river divides Juneau County into two topographic areas. The region north of the Lemonweir River Valley, which comprises two-thirds of the county, is a nearly level sand plain covered with marshes and swamps. The southern one-third of the county is a rugged, highland plateau, dissected in every direction by valleys and ravines.

The river has given its name to Lemonweir Township, the East Lemonweir Lutheran Church, the Lemonweir Valley Press, etc.

Introduction

Cemeteries have been called outdoor museums, cultural artifacts, and written and visual records of communities. I am attempting to produce a geographically local biographical or cultural landscape study. In some cases cemeteries are the only identifiable remains of a community. In the Suldal Norwegian American Community in Juneau County, Wisconsin, the West Lemonweir cemetery and the Plymouth cemetery are two examples, where the accompanying church was burned or torn down. The Plymouth Cemetery records that I have enhanced are just a part of the rich history of the Suldal Norwegian American Community in Juneau County. Einer Haugen described the Suldal Norwegian American Community in 1952 as:

"... a small settlement mostly comprised with the triangle formed by the villages of Elroy, Mauston, and New Lisbon, in the townships of [Fountain], Lisbon, Lindina, and especially Plymouth. Plymouth church [located in Lindina], 5 miles west of Mauston, is known in everyday speech as 'Suldal,' because the overwhelming majority of the members came from that place in Norway. Other dialects seem to have been displaced by this one. The youngest generation does not speak Norwegian, but in the middle and oldest generation there are many who can and do. There are 8 Lutheran congregations in the area, divided among 3 pastors; very few Norwegian services are now held. There has been much intermarriage with neighboring Germans. Grain and tobacco are chief crops." (Haugen, Einer, The Norwegian Language in America, vol. 2, pp. 611-12). It was estimated in 1908 that there were about 1,200 Norwegians from Suldal and about 500 from Upper Telemark in the settlement.

Suldal is a rural district in Rogaland County in western Norway. Originally, Suldal was the name of the Lutheran church parish in that area; then a government designated area roughly equivalent to a township in the United States. In 1994, Jon Moe, a Norwegian writer and former editor of the Stavanger Aftenblad, wrote a book, Suldal Wisconsin. The book was the result of 50 years of contact with the Norwegians in Juneau County whose ancestors migrated from his home kommune or township in Norway. He provides details of the lives of the Suldal immigrants, why they left Norway and how they are getting along in their new surroundings. Moe was intrigued by the wooden Norwegian flags placed over graves in the Plymouth cemetery as late as the 1990s.

The name Suldal lives on in Juneau County as the name of the Suldal Road and the Suldal Cemetery. The Suldal country school which was located across the road from the Plymouth Cemetery has disappeared. Suldal Crossing, a hamlet located at the corner of Johnson and Suldal roads, with a post office, store, feed mill and cheese factory has also disappeared. Only the Suldal P. O. appears on the old maps. The short-lived post office only operated from 1898 until 1901. The first postmaster was Theodore O. Felland, who served from March 8, 1898 until October 5, 1899. Ole G. Johnson served from October 6, 1899 until the Suldal post office was discontinued on June 7, 1901. The area was then served by the Mauston post office.

History of the Plymouth Cemetery,
Lindina Township, Juneau County, Wisconsin

The Plymouth Cemetery is located west of Mauston on the left side of Johnson Road. Take Highway 82 west from Mauston and turn right on Johnson Road or take Suldal Road west from Mauston and turn left on Johnson Road. The Plymouth Evangelical Lutheran Church was organized on August 26, 1896. Later that year, a joint meeting was held with the Fountain Lutheran Church members. At that time it was agreed that those who found it more convenient might join the new Plymouth Church. The members of the two churches issued a call to Reverend Lars Lund to serve the two congregations.

Oral tradition states that the church was originally to be built on Goodenough Hill in Plymouth Township. When the decision was made to move the location to Lindina Township the name was not changed. By the end of 1897, the new church was built. The basement and the steeple with a bell were not added until 1905. Because so many of the members were from the Suldal Parish in Rogaland County, Norway, it was also called the Suldal Church. Many of these members took the Suldal, Norway farm names for surnames. They included Berg, Bleskestad, Gugdahl, Lillehammer (Litlehamar), Teien, Moklev, Nordmark (Nordmork), Ritland, Quamen (Kvamen), Sandvik, Stenbro (Stenbru), Staapa, Sorestad, and Waavik.

At the same time that the church was being organized, the Plymouth Church members made the decision to have a church cemetery. At a meeting on February 6, 1897, John and Henry Quamen [Johnson] offered to donate an acre of ground to be used for a church building and cemetery ground. On March 2, 1897, a committee was appointed for the purpose of incorporating the Plymouth Church so that they could take title to the land donation. The church was completed by the next annual meeting held on December 6, 1897. The question of perpetual care of the graves in the cemetery was discussed and adopted. At first there were 8 graves to a lot, later lots could vary in the number of graves in a lot. By September 1946, there had been 109 funerals held in the Plymouth Church.

Because of the many details in this cemetery history, I am sure that some errors have crept in and are my responsibility. Please send me corrections.

Family Charts

Introduction

Several family charts have been developed to show the family connections between the church members who were buried in the Plymouth Cemetery. I have not attempted to show all of the relationships. They were spouses, grandparents, parents, brothers, sisters, fathers-in-law, mothers-in-law, brothers-in-law, sisters-in-law, nephews, nieces, and cousins. The Olson/Lillivegs and the Waarviks were double-first cousins. I have discovered three first cousin marriages but not among the double-first cousins. Most of the settlers from Suldal were already fourth, fifth, sixth, etc. cousins but I have not attempted to show those relationships.

One of the difficulties in knowing family relationships is caused by the problem of Norwegian names. At the time the emigrants came to America, they did not have set last names. Each generation took the fathers first name and added –son or –datter to it. The farm name was then added for further identification. This was complicated by the fact the many of the immigrants were renters and had changed their names in Norway each time they rented a different place. This gave the immigrants many choices of last names when they came to America. Some used their fathers name with –son added, others used farm names such as Waarvik and Gugdahl. Others used the last name taken by their father. In at least one family in Juneau County, a father and one son took the same last name, while two other sons took two other last names. In many cases they lived within five miles of each other. The present generation does not realize the relationship unless the families remained close or have worked it out by tracing their family histories. For example, Knut Olson Lilliveg sometimes appears in the records as Knut Olson and sometimes as Lilliveg. All of his children appear to have taken the name Olson. John Johnson appears in the church charter membership list as John Quamme. Most other records list him as John Johnson.

In the family charts, I have highlighted the names of those who were buried in the Plymouth Cemetery. I have included the married name as well as the maiden name for the wives and have only highlighted their married names.

Because of the many details in this cemetery history, I am sure that some errors have crept in and are my responsibility. Please send me corrections.
