University of California, Santa Barbara

From the Selected Works of Lauren L. Gallow

2014

Facebook Promotional Copy

Lauren L. Gallow, University of California - Santa Barbara

Available at: https://works.bepress.com/lgallow/24/
A Band Made Life
By Daniel Guerra

What gives your life meaning? What makes you feel alive? Sometimes it’s only after the fact, through reflection, that those experiences become visible. Sometimes they’re things you never would have expected. In the latest entry on Desert Jewels, Dan Guerra wanders down this path of reflection, and we are only too happy to be led alongside him.

Knots and Weaves
By Emma High

Those moments from the past, treasured memories and sacred spaces, they’re always with us. There to connect us to something bigger than us, bigger than this physical world. Emma High tells the story of such a moment and such a place in the latest story on Desert Jewels, and the result is pure magic. We got the chills reading her words, and know you will too.

Whose Legs Are These?
By Tara Ruttenberg

Connecting to yourself can sometimes mean acknowledging that there is more than one version of “self” living inside each of us. What does it mean to meet all of these versions, even the ones we may not like very much? In the first story for “Revisiting Roots” on Desert Jewels, Tara Ruttenberg explores this question with loads of honesty and grace.

Alterations
By Jo Edmondson

What does it mean to create your own path? To manifest your life instead of waiting for things to happen? In the latest story on Desert Jewels, Jo Edmondson shares some reflections on this theme from her recent trip to India, and we are so pumped to receive her wisdom. Jo has tapped into her power, and we hope this story will help you tap into yours.

“Revisiting Roots”
Facebook Blasts | Summer 2014

Alterations
By Jo Edmondson

What does it mean to create your own path? To manifest your life instead of waiting for things to happen? In the latest story on Desert Jewels, Jo Edmondson shares some reflections on this theme from her recent trip to India, and we are so pumped to receive her wisdom. Jo has tapped into her power, and we hope this story will help you tap into yours.

Whose Legs Are These?
By Tara Ruttenberg

Connecting to yourself can sometimes mean acknowledging that there is more than one version of “self” living inside each of us. What does it mean to meet all of these versions, even the ones we may not like very much? In the first story for “Revisiting Roots” on Desert Jewels, Tara Ruttenberg explores this question with loads of honesty and grace.