Community involvement in planning: locals participating in their local flood solutions

Neil Dufty
David Webber
Mr Andrew Gissing, Macquarie University, Australia
Community Involvement in Planning

Locals participating in their local flood solutions

Community Participation in Emergency Planning: Communities and SES on the SAME PAGE

Authors: David Webber - NSW SES, Andrew Gissing - Risk Frontiers and Neil Duffy - Molino Stewart.

There is acknowledgement across the emergency management sector of the need to shift from planning for communities to planning WITH communities, where community are equal participants.

Engaging communities as equal partners in risk decision making processes is essential to building resilient communities. (Attorney-General’s Department, 2013).

The Community Involvement in Planning Pilot Project found:

- 19 Recommendations across: Strategy; Community Engagement Practice; Capability and Capacity and; Culture which provide direction for the uptake of community participatory approaches.
- Adopting participatory-based approaches and engaging with communities be encouraged throughout all phases of the disaster management cycle where fixed organisational based objectives are best avoided as these need to be negotiated with communities.
- Engagement and participatory approaches are not a silver bullet and there needs to be flexibility in approaches to suit local communities.

Next:

- Respond to recommendations and determine future actions
- Design foundational awareness and initial centric-shift platform – SAME PAGE
- Develop Change Management Plan for shift to community-centric approaches
- Implement 12 Community Engagement Design Principles

Further Information:
Community Involvement in Planning Pilot Project reports:
Report 1: Research Report
Report 2: Design and Evaluation Report
Report 3: Final Report

Funded by the NSW Government under the State Emergency Management Projects program. The views expressed herein do not necessarily reflect the views of the NSW Government.

Project Partners:
Risk Frontiers and Molino Stewart

Contact:
david.webber@ses.nsw.gov.au

12 COMMUNITY ENGAGEMENT DESIGN PRINCIPLES

- Understand the community
- Allow sufficient time
- Engage early and often
- Be flexible and tailor your approach
- Agree on objectives from the outset
- Acknowledge the community as equals
- Engage in a two-way dialogue
- Utilise skilled facilitation expertise
- Utilise expert and local knowledge
- Utilise and build social capital
- Evaluate programs
- Foster a culture of community participation

Community engagement must be central to the business of the emergency management sector, being fully embedded within its culture, vision, policies, procedures and practice. (Attorney-General’s Department, 2013).