experiences. For example, the construction of a classroom as a place where American students learn about American history.

It is important to note that the concept of American identity is not static but evolves over time. The way in which society perceives and interacts with American identity is influenced by multiple factors, including historical events, cultural influences, and personal experiences.

The Asian Critical (Aesthetic) Framework

The experiences of Asian American students are complex and multifaceted. They are influenced by historical events, cultural factors, and personal experiences. The way in which society perceives and interacts with Asian American identity is influenced by multiple factors, including the history of immigration, cultural influences, and personal experiences.
