Extract from Wikipedia Entry for Proposed 33rd Amendment to the Constitution of Ireland, citing Tillman's Interview in The Irish Times (September 16, 2013)

Seth Barrett Tillman

Available at: https://works.bepress.com/seth_barrett_tillman/421/
Thirty-third Amendment of the Constitution Bill 2013 (Ireland)

Michael Williams wrote in The Irish Times that the Court of Appeal was no substitute for a more fundamental reform of the Courts system, which he said was unlikely as it would challenge the vested interests of lawyers.\[16\] Mattie McGrath expressed a similar viewpoint and called for a No-vote.\[17\] Seth Barrett Tillman, a lecturer in law at NUI Maynooth, considered that, since the Court of Criminal Appeal had been created without a Constitutional amendment, the same ought to be possible for a Civil Court of Appeal.\[18\]

\[18\]^"Shatter arguments for Court of Appeal 'incoherent', says law lecturer". Retrieved 20 September 2013.