Contemporary grandparenting

Changing family relationships in global contexts

Edited by Sara Arber and Virpi Timonen

“This book is a must-read for everyone interested in the role of grandparents in contemporary society.” Karl Pillemer, Cornell University, USA

“This insightful and penetrating analysis shows how modern grandparenthood shapes and is shaped by the changing social and economic contexts of family relationships.” Anne Martin-Matthews, University of British Columbia, Canada

“Will the 21st century be the ‘grandparents’ century’? We may believe so from reading this collection of contributions by leading scholars from all over the world, showing how grandparents are becoming a ‘pivot generation’ within families and within society.” Claudine Attias-Donfut, Edgar Morin Centre, Paris, France

Grandparenting in the 21st century is at the heart of profound family and societal changes. Taking a sociological approach, this book combines new theorising with up-to-date empirical findings to document the changing nature of grandparenting across global contexts.

In this highly original book, leading contributors analyse how grandparenting differs according to the nature of the welfare state and the cultural context, the influence of family breakdown, and explore men's changing roles as grandfathers. Grandparents today face conflicting norms and expectations about their roles, but act with agency to forge new identities within the context of societal and cultural constraints. Contemporary Grandparenting illuminates key issues relevant to students and researchers of sociology, social policy, family, childhood, ageing and gender studies.
