Automation may lead to huge job loss

Studies about what cataclysmic changes automation will bring about in fields of human activity in the near future are becoming more common. Researchers warn of widespread job losses for ordinary workers in poorly-paid jobs, decision makers, and even ordinary people. The trend seems to be that automation will replace human action in almost every human activity.

But the trends which are seen now and their fast pace may not reflect the imagination in the accounts. Automation in this context means the use of robots, artificial intelligence, machine learning, and other forms of computational technology and efficiency. It is set to bring about a revolution in the work environment with its impact on employment.

Leading consulting firm McKinsey has said that 50% of the tasks people do everyday may soon be automated by robots. There are 180 categories of jobs in the world out of which 70% may be automated. For example, routine jobs may be done by robots in the next 15 years or so as a result of automation. A report prepared by the Economic Forum meets at Davos also pointed to these impending changes. For example, it said that 9% of vehicles will be self-driving by 2022 which will make drivers’ jobs mostly redundant. Almost all occupations will be affected by this development and thus there is an urgent need for extraordinary skills, intelligence and creativity to be done by human beings in the future. When even these jobs are taken, every person has to think of new areas to enter as a future challenge.

PRIORITY TO ENGLISH

ENGLISH IS NOT JUST ANOTHER LANGUAGE. IT IS A KEY MEDIUM AS WELL AS A SIGNIFICANT CONTRIBUTION TO SOCIETAL-WELL-PERSONAL-JOBS.

The post-colonial elite of India and the west, Indian and American politicians were normally associated with English. The colonized nations and the west were seen as having little else in common except English. In India, when a nation is emerging out of colonial rule, it becomes signs of pride for modernity in the society. English was the language of the elite and was spoken by all the people who were not literate in their own language. English became the mark of progress and advancement elsewise.

Nagaland was the first state to adopt English as the language of instruction in schools. How to teach English in the state with other peripheral factors, in English as their own language was the challenge. It was the common state, where primary missionaries from the missionary schools were involved in the teaching of English in the Nagaland's schools.

Fifty years later, Alexander the Great and his conquerors and the world's history has a similar story. English teaching in the schools is a pinnacle. Perhaps the most popular of the language. When English teaching is not enough to suit the state of knowledge in the society. The task is made to suit the current state of the society.

The忘记 of the language teaches the people of the society that English is the sign of the progress and advancement. It is the language of the elite and the common people who are literate in their own language. English becomes the mark of progress and advancement.
